Cisco Packet Tracer.Q: Where to draw the line for answering'shopping' questions? There is an answer to this question of mine that is clearly over the line. This question is not specific. It has no value. It is not a question that people looking for help with this particular problem would even ask. It is a closed question, no doubt. And it was closed soon after I asked it. I feel that any time I see a question such as this in my suggested box (which by the way has never been clicked), I should flag it. Is that sensible? Where should this line be drawn? Should questions of this ilk be flagged, or is it ok? Are questions of this ilk sent to the SO 'help vampires' group? Should the user simply delete his question? A: Somewhat similar questions: What makes a question too broad? should they be deleted? I answered, and a moderator deleted the question... but I'd recommend following the pattern found in the link(s) provided above. In this case, the link provided (and pointed to by kiamlaluno) is the most obvious: What topics can I ask about here? If the answer is things that are too broad, you've answered it. Otherwise, you either: Flag it for moderator attention As per your example: Send it to the 'help vampires' Leave it alone. flag it for moderator attention A: There is no line. Use your judgement and be nice to everyone. A: This is what should happen: The first link on the Shog9 blog, What topics can I ask about here?, links to a meta thread about flagging, in which Barry suggested that such questions
